Joyce Raybuck AIA LEED AP

bnim PRINCIPAL

Joyce Raybuck is a Principal at BNIM with over 15 years of professional experience. Her background includes extensive national and international experience on innovative projects in higher education, embassy design, office and urban development. Joyce is interested in the relationship of quantitative performance and its qualitative manifestation in architecture. She sees research, analysis, and testing as crucial to questioning each facet of a design and its implementation. This process includes the thoughtful consideration of a building's performance relative to the integration of systems while foregrounding architecture's human-centered experiences. This, she believes, results in richer work that is cohesive from conception to realization.

Joyce's recent experience includes project leadership on two U.S. Embassy projects, the transformation of a historic Lyric Opera building into the Downtown Kirk Family YMCA, and the design of the Glenn Korff School of Music at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. Joyce also has extensive experience on higher education projects, working for institutions such as the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Yale University, Harvard University, and the University of California San Diego. She has served as adjunct faculty at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, teaching third- and fourth-year design studios.

Joyce is co-leader of BNIM's Sustainability Group and has championed firm efforts in implementing BNIM's 2020 Sustainability Action Plan and first annual sustainability report, Subject To Change. Joyce serves as an advocate for sustainable policy in Kansas City, supporting resolutions to implement positive change through climate action and community health and resiliency.
