Craig Scranton AIA NCARB LEED AP BD+C

bnim PRINCIPAL

Craig Scranton is a Principal at BNIM who has led some of the firm's most complex projects. He is adept at working with large design and management teams, which requires strong organizational attention and coordination. His previous work laid the foundation in assisting the architectural and construction industries understand how sustainable design can impact the environment and business costs throughout the life of a building.

Craig's project experience include a LEED Platinum, low-cost housing project with Make it Right and the LEED Platinum Tarrant County College District - Center of Excellence for Energy Technology for skilled trades education. He is also working on the adaptive reuse of Westport Middle School, a master plan for the east part of Washington University's campus, several Kansas City charter school renovations and additions, and a housing project in the West Bottoms.

Outside of work, Craig is an active member of his community. He serves as a Scout Master with Boy Scout Troop 24 in Kansas City, and he is on the Properties Committee with the Boy Scouts Heart of America Council.
